

Florida Academy of Family Physicians
2022 Legislative Session Interim Legislative Update
December 3, 2021

Legislators have now completed their final round of interim committee meetings. They will now take a break for the holidays and return January 11th for the start of the 2022 legislative session.

OPPAGA Report on Electrocardiograms for Student Athletes Discussed |

The House Secondary Education and Career Development Subcommittee received a report prepared by the Office of Program Policy Analysis and Governmental Accountability (OPPAGA) which evaluated the (1) benefits and challenges of requiring EKG assessments for student athletes; (2) the cost of EKG assessments; (3) the accuracy of EKG assessments; (4) the current school district practices related to requiring or recommending EKGs for student athletes and (5) the nationally recognized or accepted criteria to identify athletes who should receive an EKG assessment.

Currently, two states - Texas and Pennsylvania - have adopted EKG assessment-related legislation for student athletes; however, neither state requires an EKG assessment for all athletes. Legislation filed by Rep. Fred Hawkins (R-St. Cloud), HB 59, requires certain high school students to receive an EKG before participating in interscholastic athletics.

Committee Hears from New CEO of Florida Birth-Related Neurological Injury Compensation Association (NICA) | Members of the Senate Banking and Insurance Committee met Melissa Jaacks, the new interim CEO of NICA to hear her plans for addressing the issues recently raised over the administration of NICA. Prior to her comments, the committee heard from the Office of Insurance Regulation (OIR), Florida's auditor general and the Agency for Health Care Administration regarding their audit of NICA.

During the 2021 session, legislation was approved addressing several issues with the NICA. Ms. Jaacks said she has spent a lot of time listening to parents of the children in NICA. Specifically, she noted the following issues that are priorities for addressing: improving the benefit handbook which is too vague for families and case managers; adding a medical director or medical Board to make determinations on medical necessity and other health-related issues; formalizing the approval and denial process; establishing a family portal to provide transparency on the care provided or denied; increasing the caseload manager staff and establishing a parent advocate or parent advisory committee which will have ongoing dialogues with staff. Ms. Jaacks also noted that she is working closely with the OIR to revise NICA's plan of operations which would include a clear time limit for reimbursements. The meeting materials, including the audits, may be viewed here.

Legislative Redistricting Process Continues | The work to redraw the boundaries for state legislative and congressional districts continued this week with the House release of its proposed Congressional and House maps. The redistricting process occurs once a decade following the U.S. Census. Florida legislators must approve one new congressional seat and redraw state Senate and state House maps prior to the June 13 qualifying deadline for the 2022 election cycle. A joint interactive website is available to the public who wish to participate in the redistricting process or to access the data or maps.

2022 Doctor of the Day Program | The application for the Legislature's Doctor of the Day Program has been released and now is the time for FAFP members to express their desire to volunteer for this program. A physician is designated for each day of the nine-week session and plays an important role in the FAFP's advocacy efforts. For further information, please contact FAFP Executive Vice President Jay Millson at jmillson@fafp.org.
